

Nervous:

About one or two years ago, I easily got nervous specially in formal meeting, while participating in classrooms discussions etc. I never ever participated in tableau, in assembly or anything. Once my friends and teachers forced me to do something on stage. The day when I had to speak, I thought that I am not going to college, but my friends forced me to come. When I was about to called, my legs began to tremble a little. I placate myself myself that now yourself self-respect is in your hands. All college students and teachers were present in assembly hall and I already started getting nervous. When I was called, my hands began to shake. I hold my mic and believe me at that time my body start shaking, I tried to hold the hands tightly so that mic will static, but by doing this my hands starts shaking more. I just said what I remembered the part of quote that time was not understandable by anyone. Then I heard a voice of girl saying to someone to "tell him to hold the mic tight cause he is constantly shaking it".

WORRIED:-

When I am worried, I wanted to have some time alone with myself only. At the same time, I wanted someone with me to whom I share for what I am worried, but that particular who don't judge me, don't laugh at my situation and who understand me and provide a best solution to that problem. Mostly, I spend my time alone thinking about problems, try to ~~settle~~ find the solution and implement the solution.

Happy:-

I don't have words to tell how I react when I feel happy, but I will talk about my behaviors when ~~it~~ it was its happiest moment. I just feel most happy when my parents are happy with me. And I feel like I am the happiest and luckiest son in the world. I feel very happy and my happiness will be clearly seen by my face.

→ Angry:-

Recently, in uni, my ^{father} friend transferred 10K rupees to my friend's ~~bank~~ cash account and he got hacked. He lost all his money including my 10K rupees. At that time I don't have money in the pocket. Rather than I stay calm and handle the situation peacefully, I started shouting at him. My temper level was very increased. My friends came and handle the situation. They said me to learn how to control your anger.
