Q:1) What is the rhetorical situation in the text?

Ans: The rhetorical situation in this text is minority-owned businesses (like black or hispanic people's businesses) have not given the rights to expand their business because companies are not giving them contracts. First of all civil right activists have raised the voice against it, and now government has also passed the law that forces the companies to provide businesses to minority people.

PURPOSE: The purpose of author is to inform people about the effects caused by this new law. There is new opportunity for minorities to expand their business but there are also risks that may cause financial problems.

AUDIENCE:- The targeted audience is:

- 1.) The companies that have to provide business to minority according to new law.
- 2.) Minority people who want to expand their business.

Q.2) What is the author's intentions?

Q.2) What is the author's intentions?

Author's intention is to inform people that minority people are receiving contracts because of new law passed by government. But there are also risks in it.

But there are also risks in it.

But there are also risks in it. Author is providing neutral analysis. At one side it's new opportunities for minorities but on the other hand there is also risk of rapid expansion and sudden downfall, financial problem and dependencies.

Q:3) What is the central idea or assertion of the text?
The central idea of this text is the government's new law for minorities that gives new opportunities as well as risks for them.

The new policies ~~are~~ have given the small businesses a change to expand them as they have not been given the contracts from large companies. The policies helps them in their growth. Industries started expanding them rapidly with out increase and if in future to expand them as they are. The policies helps them to expand from large companies. But if municipalities started expanding them rapidly without thinking anything, the expenses will increase and if in future they receive less contracts, they will face financial loss.

Q.4) What is the effect of tone at the ~~begin~~ beginning of the text?

Q:4) What is the effect of the text?

At the beginning of the text, the tone is hopeful and positive. In the beginning, the author is informing ~~them~~ that the minority business have given new opportunities, which ~~was~~ were. This positive tone keeps people interested so they can understand previous problems and what improvements are happening now.

Q:5) What rhetorical methods are used to develop the argument?

Some rhetorical methods are used to develop the argument.

- 1) Problem/Solution:- Firstly, author is informing that ~~minorities~~ businesses are not receiving contracts. / ~~Cause~~ Problem
Then he's informing that new policies have given them new opportunities / ~~of~~ Solution
- 2) Cause/Effect: This shows that due to new policies the contracts are increasing.
But there are many risks in it like financial risks.
- 3) Narration: Author used history and narration to show the change in recent years.

Q:6) How does the conclusion involve the audience?

Conclusion helps the reader to think that whether these policies are helpful for real or they are just temporary solution. This also informs that if minorities do not plan wisely, this new system could be risky for them.
This directly effect the company owners, policy makers and general public, therefore conclusion is relevant and thought-provoking
